CUPID IN RUSSIA.

Here the Little God In Given Every

Attention-Matrimony the Fashion.

A Russian society woman knows only one thing-fashion. Art is a stranger to her. She loves admiration and flirtation but her heart remains cold, though she may be burning other hearts with the fire of her eyes. Nowhere is woman more Let me now mention a peculiarity of Russian society, which is not to be found in any other society in the whole world To begin, a Russian girl seeks a husband only for the position he gives her. Matrimony is only a question of fashion, and if a Russian girl cannot find a husband within a reasonable time, she can fill no place in good society, and she is ridiend of her spring youth. Every tentative is thus made to win the grand prize of

Is thus made to win the grand prize of matrimony. Even her friends are as anxious as she is, and as fearsome lest she may become an old maid. Then, when all efforts have failed, when no more hope remains, she takes advantage of the sole remedy left to her, "maiden widowhood." She travels, Goes to Paris, Nice, etc. She stays away three or four years, maybe, then returns to Russian society, no longer an old maid, nor even a wife, but a widow. Nobody asks whom she married, nor now she became a widow. She is a widow; that suffices, And as a widow she is receved, everywhere and is—somebody!

ceved everywhere and is-somebody! A Puzzling Afterthought.

Two years ago a Chicago drummer stopped at Decatur, Ala., and while sitting on the broad hotel piazza talking with the proprietor of the hostelry noticed a fine lighting cock strutting about the street.

"Pretty fine bird," remarked the Chicagoan, sententiously, "Yes," replied the hotelkeeper, "best in

"I'es." replied the hotelkeeper, "best in these parts. I reckon."
"I'm something of a chicken fancier, myself." continued the drummer.
"Se? Glad to know it, sah."
"Tell you what I'll do—I'll play you a game of seven-up for that rooster," said the drummer.
"Do it with pleasure, sah," replied his host.

host.
The cards were produced and the drummer won. The rooster was turned over to him, and was brought to the world's fair city.

preserve and transmit from generation to generation the ideas and principles which are deemed to be of permanent value. He who does not do this soon passes out of thought and is forgotten (Psalm xc:17). Now, what did Jesus establish with the hope that it would servive Him. Lesson nine answers, a memorable feast. Two articles only, bread and wine, were to be used, and these as emblems of His body and blood, therefore as reminders of His death. The Lord's Supper, so simple, substituted for the Passover of the Jesus expected to publish to men and to keep alive in the hearts of His followers the central fact and doctrine of the Gospel (Rom. v:6). He asked not that His birth should be commemorated, that a monument should be erected, that any high and imposing ceremonial should be observed, but that an inexpensive feast should be spread, the occasion to be one of solemnity and thanks:
